MEDINA LAKE BILL PASSED BY SENATE

Secretary Furlong of San Antonio Automobile Club Forecasts Results of the Act

ITS PROVISIONS DRASTIC

William H. Furlong, secretary of the San Antonio Automobile Club, returned from Austin to San Antonio yesterday with the information that the special bill providing a law for the preservation of fish in the valley of the Medina River had passed the Texas Senate. The bill already had been passed by the House and now goes to the Governor for his signature. Governor Ferguson has signified his willingness to sign the measure, and it is expected the bill will become a law in a few days.

Mr. Furlong spent several days in Austin urging the passage of the bill. "Naturally the Automobile Club of San Antonio is delighted over the fate of the bill," said Mr. Furlong last night. "The club months ago took it upon itself to make Medina Lake a pleasure resort. We brought about the erection of the hotel near Medina dam, and 600 persons were enrolled as members of the auxiliary of the Automobile Club, which maintained headquarters at the lake."

"John M. Roberts was one of the most active leaders in making the resort attractive to San Antonians and tourists. The club built a road to the lake and the resort established near the dam became one of the most popular places for sportsmen in the Southwest."

"Several months ago we found many persons were abusing the privileges accorded a true sportsman. Too many fish were taken from the lake. Wanton slaughter was the practice of many. Accordingly, M. J. Arnold drafted the bill which now has been passed by the Legislature. The law will be rigidly enforced by the State and the Automobile Club will co-operate."

"Incidentally I might mention that the projected new road from San Antonio to Medina Lake will shorten the trip. The route now totals a fraction less than thirty-six miles. When the new highway, for which $35,000 is to be expended, has been completed, the distance will be twenty-nine and one-half miles. The stock should be sold in ninety days, and all details of financing completed within that period."

TEXT OF BILL.

The bill drafted by Mr. Arnold follows:

"A bill to be entitled a special law for the preservation of bass and other fish of the bass species, and of perch, sun fish and crappie, and other fish of the perch, sun fish and crappie species, in the following locality: In any water which is located in the valley of the Medina River from where the lower or diversion dam above the town of Castroville crosses the Medina River, in Medina county, Texas, to a point on the Medina River in Bandera county, which by following the meanders of the Medina River upward towards its source constitutes a distance of 25 miles, and in any of the waters which are impounded by the lower or diversion dam above the town of Castroville in Medina county, Texas, and in any of the waters that are impounded by the upper or main dam in Medina county, Texas, which is located about four miles above said lower or diversion dam; and making it unlawful to catch and retain, or having possession of, any bass, or other fish of the bass species weighing less than one pound, or to catch and retain, or have in possession of, in any one day, a total aggregate of more than ten bass or other fish of the bass species, or to catch and retain, or have possession of, in any one day, a total aggregate of more than 20 perch, crappie or other sun fish species, and making it unlawful to use a dowsing or similar device for catching fish, during the months of March, April and May of any year, and making it unlawful to sell, offer for sale, or buy, any fish caught in any of said waters, and providing that the special act shall be cumulative of the general laws of the State and not repeal same, and providing for a penalty for violation of said special law, and declaring an emergency, and fixing the venue of the prosecutions for violation of the law, and providing it shall not be unlawful to catch and retain more than 20 perch to be used for bait, provided none of such perch so caught for bait are larger than two inches long.

PROVISIONS OF MEASURE.

"Be it enacted by the Legislature of the State of Texas as follows:

"Section 1. It shall be unlawful for any person who shall fish in any water which is located in the valley of the Medina River, from where the lower or diversion dam above the town of Castroville crosses the Medina River in Medina county, Texas, to a point on the Medina River in Bandera county, Texas, which by following the meanders of the Medina River upward toward its source, shall constitute a distance of 25 miles or in any water which is impounded in Medina county, Texas, by said lower or diversion dam, or by any water which is impounded in Medina county, Texas, and in Bandera county, Texas, by what is known as the upper or main dam which crosses the Medina River a distance of about four miles above the said lower or diversion dam, to catch and retain, or have in his possession, any bass, or other fish of the bass species, which shall weigh less than one pound; or to catch and retain, or have in his possession, in any one day, more than a total aggregate of ten bass or other fish of the bass species; or to catch and retain, or have in his possession in one day, a total aggregate of more than 20 perch, crappie, or sun fish, or other fish of the perch, crappie or sun fish species which shall be larger than two inches long; or shall at any time during the months of March, April and May of any year, make use of a dowsing or other similar device for catching fish, but this provision shall not prohibit what is known as fly fishing."

"Sec. 2. It shall be unlawful for any person to sell, or offer for sale, or to buy, any fish caught in any of the waters described in section 1 hereof."

PENALTIES ARE PROVIDED.

"Sec. 3. Any person violating any provision of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not less than $5, nor more than $15, for each violation of this law, and each fish caught in violation of this act shall be deemed a separate violation hereof, and a separate offense, and he may be prosecuted either in the county where the fish are caught, or where he is found with them in his possession, or where the fish are sold, or bought, or where they are offered for sale."

"Sec. 4. This special law is meant to be cumulative of the general law of the State of Texas, and is not meant to repeal the general law of the State of Texas."

"Sec. 5. Nothing in this act shall prohibit the catching of more than twenty perch or sunfish to be used for bait, provided none of the perch or sunfish so caught to be used for bait shall be larger than two inches in length."

"Sec. 6. The fact that there is no adequate law which protects the fish in the locality described in section 1 of this act, and the fact that the fish meant to be protected by this act in the locality described in section 1 hereof, are being caught in great quantities by persons who make no use thereof, creates such an emergency and an imperative public necessity necessitating that the constitutional rule requiring bills to be read on three several days, be suspended, and the rule is hereby suspended, and this act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage, and it is so enacted."

Judge Lamm and Dan Cupid are Busy

The enterprising and always obliging firm of Lamm, Cupid & Co. has been very busy this week.

Mr. Cupid worked up the cases and Judge Lamm performed the ceremony for three couples.

Last Saturday, two citizens of the land of "manana," Sr. Santiago Alvarado and Srta. Clara Fuentes, were tied together good and fast.

The Judge kept the Sabbath holy and didn't work, but on Monday he donned his court robes, official manners and charming smile and very obligingly accommodated Sr. Pedro Salinas and Srta. Herlinda Riojas by making Pedro the friole-winner.

Tuesday night, at 7 o'clock the Judge and his estimable wife went to the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Dumont where Judge Lamm united Mr. John Graham and Miss Lena Marquis in holy wedlock. The young couple are both residents of the Tarpley neighborhood. After the ceremony the entire wedding party, including Judge and Mrs. Lamm, attended the picture show.

Judge Lamm's services are always in demand and his business is not suffering on account of the so-called hard times.

The gentlemen spoke to a good sized audience and after hearing the speakers those present endorsed the law by a rising vote. The Medina county delegation extended the gentlemen an invitation to come to Hondo and deliver addresses, which they agreed to do Saturday, March 27th.

10,000 Owners Proved It Right

The Light Six, remember—the car of today—has upset many standards.

It means a new type, high-speed motor.

It means new materials, lighter and stronger.

It means re-designing a thousand parts to save 1,000 pounds without sacrificing staunchness. The best of makers risk mistakes in revising old standards that way.

The HUDSON Six-40 is the one Light Six which has proved itself beyond question.

There are 5,000 last-year models running—5,000 this-year models. These 10,000 owners have driven them at least 25 million miles.

They have proved that the car is faultless. Ask any of them. With one accord these owners say, "HUDSON is my ideal car."

The HUDSON is the pioneer Light Six.

Its famous designer—Howard E. Coffin—is the creator of this type. He has spent four years on this model, with the whole HUDSON engineering corps at work with him.

So you see in this car—not a first attempt—but the final refinement in the Light Six type.

You can see the result in the finish, the detail. You can see it in advanced equipment. You can see it in record lightness.

But its chief appeal lies in the fact that the HUDSON is the proved-out car of its type. You know it is free from mistakes. You see in this car the Light Six as it will be.

And HUDSON service is the best in America. It is extreme in its protections. Every HUDSON owner knows that.

To The Housewife.

Madam, if your husband is like most men he expects you to look after the health of yourself and children. Coughs and colds are the most common of the minor ailments and are most likely to lead to serious diseases. A child is much more likely to contract diphtheria or scarlet fever when it has a cold. If you will inquire into the merits of the various remedies that are recommended for coughs and colds, you will find that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy stands high in the estimation of people who use it. It is prompt and effectual, pleasant and safe to take, which are qualities especially to be desired when a medicine is intended for children. For sale by All Dealers.

The Abysmal Brute

By JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1913, by The Century Co.

Glendon, innocent of the world's ways, goes to San Francisco and is matched with "Roughhouse Kelly."

He whips Kelly and other boxers so easily that he is called "One Punch Glendon." He meets the Flying Dutchman.

Glendon wins again. He hears the top in pugilism. His manager, Stubener, engages in crooked ring practices, unknown to Glendon.

Glendon tells her he will stop Nat Powers in the eighteenth round of the sixteenth round of a forthcoming fight, sixteen being the secret information of the betting syndicate.

Maud attends the battle. Despite Glendon's promise Powers is apparently knocked out in the sixteenth round. Glendon visits Maud.

was aware of a sinister feeling.

She had not seen the last of this very disquieting Pat Glendon, king of the bruisers and abysmal brute.

Back in the training quarters, Glendon encountered his perturbed manager.

"What did you fire me out for?" Stubener demanded. "We're finished. A — of a mess you've made. You've never stood for meeting a reporter alone before, and now you'll see when that interview comes out."

Glendon, who had been regarding him with cool amusement, made as if to turn and pass on and then changed his mind.

"It won't come out," he said.

Stubener looked up sharply.

"I asked her not to," Glendon explained.

Then Stubener exploded.

"As if she'd kill a juicy thing like that."

Glendon became very cold, and his voice was harsh and grating.

"It won't be published," he told me so. And to doubt it is to call her a liar."

The Irish dame was in his eyes, and by that and by the unconscious clinching of his passion wrought hands Stubener, who knew the strength of them and of the man he faced, no longer dared to doubt.

It did not take Stubener long to find out that Glendon intended extending the distance of the fight, though try as he would he could get no hint of the number of the round.

He wasted no time, however, and privately clinched certain arrangements with Nat Powers and Nat Powers' manager. Powers had a faithful following of bettors, and the betting syndicate was not to be denied its harvest.

On the night of the fight, Maud Sangster was guilty of a more daring unconventionality than any she had yet committed, though no whisper of it leaked out to shock society.

Under the protection of the editor she occupied a ringside seat. Her hair and most of her face were hidden under a sash hat, while she wore a man's long overcoat that fell to her heels.

Entering in the thick of the crowd she was not noticed, nor did the newspaper men in the press seats against the ring directly in front of her recognize her.

As was the growing custom, there were no preliminary bouts, and she had barely gained her seat when roars of applause announced the arrival of Nat Powers.

He came down the aisle in the midst of his seconds, and she was almost frightened by the formidable bulk of him. Yet he leaped the ropes as lightly as a man half his weight and grinned acknowledgment to the tumultuous greeting that arose from all the house.

He was not pretty. Two cauliflower ears attested his profession and its attendant brutality, while his broken nose had been so often spread over his face as to defy the surgeon's art to reconstruct it.

Another uproar heralded the arrival of Glendon, and she watched him eagerly as he went through the ropes to his corner.

But it was not until the tedious time of announcements, introductions and challenges was over that the two men threw off their wraps and faced each other in ring costume.

Concentrated upon them from overhead was the white glare of many electric lights—this for the benefit of the moving picture cameras—and she felt, as she looked at the two sharply contrasted men, that it was in Glendon that she saw the thoroughbred and in Powers the abysmal brute.

Both looked their parts—Glendon clean cut in face and form, softly and massively beautiful; Powers almost asymmetrically rugged and heavily matted with hair.

As they made their preliminary pose for the cameras, confronting each other in fighting attitudes, it chanced that Glendon's gaze dropped down through the ropes and rested on her face.

Though he gave no sign, she knew, with a swift leap of the heart, that he had recognized her.

The next moment the gong sounded, the announcer called "Let her go!" and the battle was on.

It was a good fight. There was no blood, no marring, and both were clever. Half of the first round was spent in feeling each other out, but Maud Sangster found the play and feint and tap of the gloves sufficiently exciting.

During some of the fiercer rallies in later stages of the fight the editor was compelled to touch her arm to remind her who she was and where she was.

Powers fought easily and cleanly, as became the hero of half a hundred ring battles, and an admiring clique applauded his every cleverness.

Yet he did not unduly exert himself save in occasional strenuous rallies that brought the audience yelling to its feet in the mistaken notion that he was getting his man.

It was at such a moment, when her unpracticed eye could not inform her

Maud Sangster found the play of the gloves sufficiently exciting.

that Glendon was escaping serious damage, that the editor leaned to her and said:

"Young Pat will win all right. He's a comer, and they can't stop him. But he'll win in the sixteenth and not before."

"Or after?" she asked.

She almost laughed at the certitude of her companion's negative. She knew better.

Powers was noted for hunting his man from moment to moment and round to round, and Glendon was content to accede to this program.

His defense was admirable, and he threw in just enough of offense to whet the edge of the audience's interest.

Though he knew he was scheduled to lose, Powers had had too long a ring experience to hesitate from knocking his man out if the opportunity offered. He had had the double cross-worked too often on him to be chary in working it on others.

If he got his chance he was prepared to knock his man out and let the syndicate go hang.

Thanks to clever press publicity, the idea was prevalent that at last young Glendon had met his master.

In his heart Powers, however, knew that it was himself who had encountered the better man. More than once, in the faster fighting, he received the weight of punches that he knew had been deliberately made no heavier.

On Glendon's part there were times and times when a slip or error of judgment could have exposed him to one of his antagonist's sledge hammer blows and lost him the fight.

Yet his was that almost miraculous power of accurate timing and distancing, and his confidence was not shaken by the several close shaves he experienced.

He had never lost a fight, never been knocked down, and he had always been so thoroughly the master of the man he faced, that such a possibility was unthinkable.

At the end of the fifteenth round both men were in good condition, though Powers was breathing a trifle heavily and there were men in the ringside seats offering odds that he would "blow up."

It was just before the gong for the sixteenth round struck that Stubener, leaning over Glendon from behind in his corner, whispered:

"Are you going to get him now?"

Glendon, with a back toss of his head, shook it and laughed mockingly up into his manager's anxious face.

With the stroke of the gong for the sixteenth round Glendon was surprised to see Powers cut loose.

From the first second it was a tornado of fighting, and Glendon was hard put to escape serious damage. He blocked, clinched, ducked, sidestepped, was rushed backward against the ropes and was met by fresh rushes when he surged out to center.

Several times Powers left inviting openings, but Glendon refused to loose the lightning bolt of a blow that would drop his man.

He was reserving that blow for two rounds later. Not in the whole fight had he ever exerted his full strength nor struck with the force that was in him.

For two minutes, without the slightest letup, Powers went at him hammer and tongs.

In another minute the round would be over and the betting syndicate hard hit.

But that minute was not to be. They had just come together in the center of the ring. It was as ordinary a clinch as any in the fight, save that Powers was struggling and roughing it every instant.

Glendon whipped his left over in a crisp but easy jolt to the side of the face. It was like any of a score of similar jolts he had already delivered in the course of the fight.

To his amazement he felt Powers go

limp in his arms and begin sinking to the floor on sagging, spraddling legs that refused to bear his weight.

He struck the floor with a thump, rolled half over on his side and lay with closed eyes and motionless. The referee, bending above him, was shouting the count.

At the cry of "Nine!" Powers quivered as if making a vain effort to rise. "Ten—and out!" cried the referee.

He caught Glendon's hand and raised it aloft to the roaring audience in token that he was the winner.

For the first time in the ring Glendon was dazed. It had not been a knockout blow. He could stake his life on that.

It had not been to the jaw, but to the side of the face, and he knew it had gone there and nowhere else. Yet the man was out, had been counted out, and he had faked it beautifully. That final thump on the floor had been a convincing masterpiece.

To the audience it was indubitably a knockout, and the moving picture machines would perpetuate the lie. The editor had called the turn, after all, and a crooked turn it was.

Glendon shot a swift glance through the ropes to the face of Maud Sangster. She was looking straight at him, but her eyes were black and hard, and there was neither recognition nor expression in them.

Even as he looked she turned away unconcernedly and said something to the man beside her.

Powers' seconds were carrying him to his corner, a seeming limp wreck of a man.

Glendon's seconds were advancing upon him to congratulate him and to remove his gloves.

But Stubener was ahead of them. His face was beaming as he caught Glendon's right glove in both his hands and cried:

"Good boy, Pat! I knew you'd do it."

Glendon pulled his glove away. And for the first time in the years they had been together his manager heard him swear.

"You go to —!" he said and turned to hold out his hands for his seconds to pull off the gloves.

That night, after receiving the editor's final dictum that there was not a square fighter in the game, Maud Sangster cried quietly for a moment on the edge of her bed, grew angry and went to sleep hugely disgusted with herself, prizefighters and the world in general.

CHAPTER IX.

THE next afternoon she began work on an interview with Henry Addison that was destined never to be finished. It was in the private room that was accorded her at the Courier-Journal office that the thing happened.

She had paused in her writing to glance at a headline in the afternoon paper announcing that Glendon was matched with Tom Cannam when one of the doorboys brought in a card. It was Glendon's.

"Tell him I can't be seen," she told the boy.

In a minute he was back.

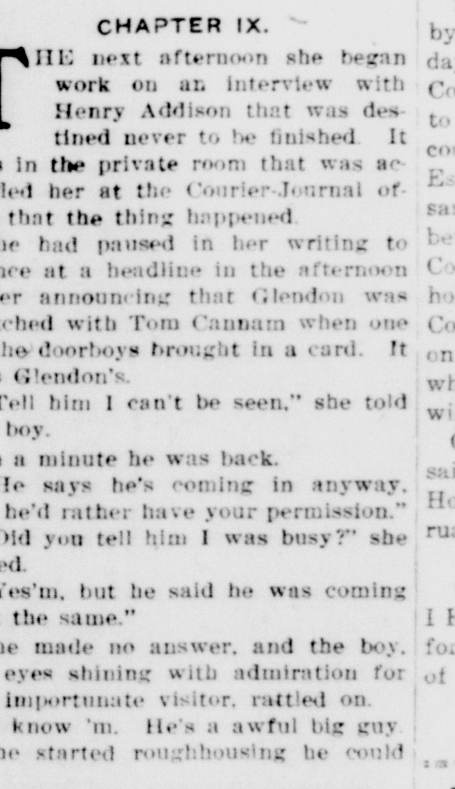

"He says he's coming in anyway, but he'd rather have your permission."

"Did you tell him I was busy?" she asked.

"Yes'm, but he said he was coming just the same."

She made no answer, and the boy, his eyes shining with admiration for the importunate visitor, rattled on.

"I know 'm. He's a awful big guy. If he started roughhousing he could

"You didn't," he retorted.

clean the whole office out. He's young Glendon, who won the fight last night."

"Very well, then. Bring him in. We don't want the office cleaned out, you know."

No greetings were exchanged when Glendon entered.

She was as cold and inhospitable as a gray day and neither invited him to a chair nor recognized him with her eyes, sitting half turned away from him at her desk and waiting for him to state his business.

He gave no sign of how this cavalier treatment affected him, but plunged directly into his subject.

"I want to talk to you," he said shortly. "That fight. It did end in that round."

She shrugged her shoulders.

"I knew it would."

"You didn't," he retorted. "You didn't. I didn't."

She turned and looked at him with quiet affectation of boredom.

"What is the use?" she asked. "Prizefighting is prizefighting, and we all know what it means. The fight did end in the round I told you it would."

"It did," he agreed. "But you didn't know it would. In all the world you and I were at least two that knew Powers wouldn't be knocked out in the sixteenth."

She remained silent.

"I say you knew he wouldn't."

He spoke peremptorily and, when she still declined to speak, stepped nearer to her.

"Answer me," he commanded.

She nodded her head.

"But he was," she insisted.

"He wasn't. He wasn't knocked out at all. Do you get that? I am going to tell you about it and you are going to listen. I didn't lie to you. Do you get that? I didn't lie to you. I was a fool and they fooled me and you along with me."

"You thought you saw him knocked out. Yet the blow I struck was not heavy enough. It didn't hit him in the right place either. He made believe it did. He faked that knockout."

He paused and looked at her expectantly, and somehow, with a leap and thrill, she knew that she believed him, and she felt pervaded by a warm happiness at the reinstatement of this man who meant nothing to her and whom she had seen but twice in her life.

THAT COLD YOU HAVE

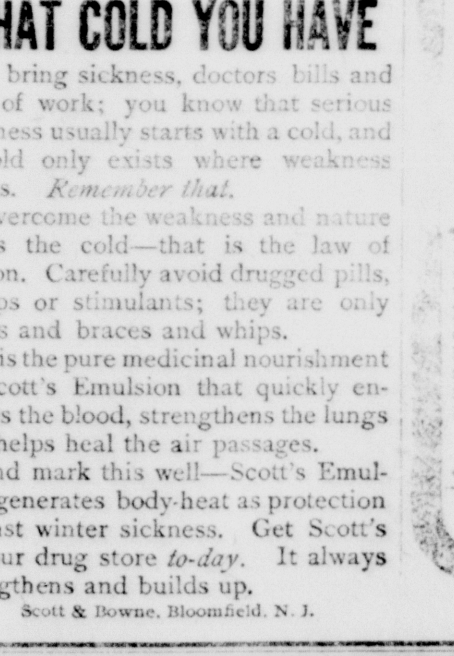

may bring sickness, doctors bills and loss of work; you know that serious sickness usually starts with a cold, and a cold only exists where weakness exists. Remember that.

Overcome the weakness and nature cures the cold—that is the law of reason. Carefully avoid drugged pills, syrups or stimulants; they are only props and braces and whips.

NOTHING BETTER FOR WEAK WOMEN

"I Never Spent Any Money That Did Me So Much Good as That I Spent for Vinol."

Bellevue, Ohio.—"I wish every tired, weak, nervous woman could have Vinol for I never spent any money in my life that did me so much good as that I spent for Vinol. My nerves were in a very bad condition, making me weak, tired, and worn out and often drowsy headaches. I had tried cod liver oil, doctor's medicines, and other preparations without benefit."

"One day a friend asked me to try Vinol. I did and soon my appetite increased, I slept better and now I am strong, vigorous and well and can do my housework with pleasure."—Mrs. LAMBORN, Bellevue, Ohio.

Nervous, weak, tired, worn-out women should take Mrs. Lamborn's advice and try Vinol for there are literally thousands of men and women who were formerly run-down, weak and nervous, who owe their good health to Vinol.

It is the medicinal, tissue building elements of the cod's livers, aided by its blood making, strengthening influence of tonic iron, contained in Vinol, which makes it so efficient in all such cases.

Made My Life Worth Living

"I feel it my duty to tell others what Chamberlain's Tablets have done for me," writes Mrs. L. Dunlap of Oak Grove, Mich. "I have suffered with pains in my back and under my shoulder blade for a number of years, also with a poor appetite and constipation. I tried all of the remedies that I heard of, and a number of doctors, but got no relief. Finally a friend told me to try Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. I got a bottle of them and they soon helped my stomach; by their gentle action my bowels became more regular. Today I feel like praising them to all who suffer as I did, for they have cured me and made my life worth living."

SYNOPSIS

Glendon, innocent of the world's ways, goes to San Francisco and is matched with "Roughhouse Kelly."

He whips Kelly and other boxers so easily that he is called "One Punch Glendon." He meets the Flying Dutchman.

Glendon wins again. He hears the top in pugilism. His manager, Stubener, engages in crooked ring practices, unknown to Glendon.

Through Maud Sangster, a reporter, Glendon first learns of these crooked practices and first suspects Stubener.

Glendon tells her he will stop Nat Powers in the eighteenth round of the sixteenth round of a forthcoming fight, sixteen being the correct information of the betting syndicate.

Maud attends the battle. Despite Glendon's promise Powers is apparently knocked out in the sixteenth round. Glendon visits Maud.

was aware of a similar feeling.

She had not seen the last of this very disquieting Pat Glendon, king of the bruisers and abysmal brute.

Back in the training quarters, Glendon encountered his perturbed manager.

"What did you fire me out for?" Stubener demanded. "We're finished. A — of a mess you've made. You've never stood for meeting a reporter alone before, and now you'll see when that interview comes out."

Glendon, who had been regarding him with cool amazement, made as if to turn and pass on and then changed his mind.

"It won't come out," he said. Stubener looked up sharply. "I asked her not to," Glendon explained.

Then Stubener exploded. "As if she'd kill a juicy thing like that."

Glendon became very cold, and his voice was harsh and grating. "It won't be published. She told me so. And to doubt it is to call her a liar."

The Irish flame was in his eyes, and by that and by the unconscious clinching of his passion wrought hands Stubener, who knew the strength of them and of the man he faced, no longer dared to doubt.

It did not take Stubener long to find out that Glendon intended extending the distance of the fight, though try as he would he could get no hint of the number of the round.

He wasted no time, however, and privately clinched certain arrangements with Nat Powers and Nat Powers' manager. Powers had a faithful following of bettors, and the betting syndicate was not to be denied its harvest.

On the night of the fight, Maud Sangster was guilty of a more daring unconventional than any she had yet committed, though no whisper of it leaked out to shock society.

Under the protection of the editor she occupied a ringside seat. Her hair and most of her face were hidden under a slouch hat, while she wore a man's long overcoat that fell to her heels.

Entering in the thick of the crowd she was not noticed, nor did the newspaper men in the press seats against the ring directly in front of her recognize her.

As was the growing custom, there were no preliminary bouts, and she had barely gained her seat when roars of applause announced the arrival of Nat Powers.

He came down the aisle in the midst of his seconds, and she was almost frightened by the formidable bulk of him. Yet he leaped the ropes as lightly as a man half his weight and grinned acknowledgement to the tumultuous greeting that arose from all the house.

He was not pretty. Two cauliflower ears attested his profession and its attendant brutality, while his broken nose had been so often spread over his face as to defy the surgeon's art to reconstruct it.

Another uproar heralded the arrival of Glendon, and she watched him eagerly as he went through the ropes to his corner.

But it was not until the tedious time of announcements, introductions and challenges was over that the two men threw off their wraps and faced each other in ring costume.

Concentrated upon them from overhead was the white glare of many electric lights—this for the benefit of the moving picture cameras—and she felt, as she looked at the two sharply contrasted men, that it was in Glendon that she saw the thoroughbred and in Powers the abysmal brute.

Both looked their parts—Glendon clean cut in face and form, softly and massively beautiful; Powers almost asymmetrically rugged and heavily matted with hair.

As they made their preliminary pose for the cameras, confronting each other in fighting attitudes, it chanced that Glendon's gaze dropped down through the ropes and rested on her face.

Though he gave no sign, she knew, with a swift leap of the heart, that he had recognized her.

The next moment the gong sounded, the announcer called "Let her go!" and the battle was on.

It was a good fight. There was no blood, no marring, and both were

Maud Sangster found the play of the gloves sufficiently exciting.

that Glendon was escaping serious damage, that the editor leaned to her and said:

"Young Pat will win all right. He's a comer, and they can't stop him. But he'll win in the sixteenth and not before."

"Or after?" she asked.

She almost laughed at the certitude of her companion's negative. She knew better.

Powers was noted for hunting his man from moment to moment and round to round, and Glendon was content to accede to this program.

His defense was admirable, and he threw in just enough of offense to whet the edge of the audience's interest.

Though he knew he was scheduled to lose, Powers had had too long a ring experience to hesitate from knocking his man out if the opportunity offered. He had had the double cross-worked too often on him to be chary in working it on others.

If he got his chance he was prepared to knock his man out and let the syndicate go bang.

Thanks to clever press publicity, the idea was prevalent that at last young Glendon had met his master.

In his heart Powers, however, knew that it was himself who had encountered the better man. More than once, in the faster fighting, he received the weight of punches that he knew had been deliberately made no heavier.

On Glendon's part there were times and times when a slip or error of judgment could have exposed him to one of his antagonist's sledge hammer blows and lost him the fight.

Yet his was that almost miraculous power of accurate timing and distancing, and his confidence was not shaken by the several close shaves he experienced.

He had never lost a fight, never been knocked down, and he had all ways been so thoroughly the master of the man he faced, that such a possibility was unthinkable.

At the end of the fifteenth round both men were in good condition, though Powers was breathing a trifle heavily and there were men in the ringside seats offering odds that he would "blow up."

It was just before the gong for the sixteenth round struck that Stubener, leaning over Glendon from behind in his corner, whispered:

"Are you going to get him now?"

Glendon, with a back toss of his head, shook it and laughed mockingly up into his manager's anxious face.

With the stroke of the gong for the sixteenth round Glendon was surprised to see Powers cut loose.

From the first second it was a tornado of fighting, and Glendon was hard put to escape serious damage. He blocked, clinched, ducked, sidestepped, was rushed backward against the ropes and was met by fresh rushes when he surged out to center.

Several times Powers left inviting openings, but Glendon refused to loose the lightning bolt of a blow that would drop his man.

He was reserving that blow for two rounds later. Not in the whole fight had he ever exerted his full strength nor struck with the force that was in him.

For two minutes, without the slightest letup, Powers went at him hammer and tongs.

In another minute the round would be over and the betting syndicate hard hit.

But that minute was not to be. They had just come together in the center of the ring. It was as ordinary a clinch as any in the fight, save that Powers was struggling and roughing it every instant.

Glendon whipped his left over in a crisp but easy jolt to the side of the face. It was like any of a score of similar jolts he had already delivered in the course of the fight.

To his amazement he felt Powers go

limp in his arms and begin sinking to the floor on sagging, spraddling legs that refused to bear his weight.

He struck the floor with a thump, rolled half over on his side and lay with closed eyes and motionless. The referee, bending above him, was shouting the count.

At the cry of "Nine" Powers quivered as if making a vain effort to rise. "Ten—and out!" cried the referee.

He caught Glendon's hand and raised it aloft to the roaring audience in token that he was the winner.

For the first time in the ring Glendon was dazed. It had not been a knockout blow. He could stake his life on that.

It had not been to the jaw, but to the side of the face, and he knew it had gone there and nowhere else. Yet the man was out, had been counted out, and he had faked it beautifully. That final thump on the floor had been a convincing masterpiece.

To the audience it was indubitably a knockout, and the moving picture machines would perpetuate the lie. The editor had called the turn, after all, and a crooked turn it was.

Glendon shot a swift glance through the ropes to the face of Maud Sangster. She was looking straight at him, but her eyes were black and hard, and there was neither recognition nor expression in them.

Even as he looked she turned away unconcernedly and said something to the man beside her.

Powers' seconds were carrying him to his corner, a seeming limp wreck of a man.

Glendon's seconds were advancing upon him to congratulate him and to remove his gloves.

But Stubener was ahead of them. His face was beaming as he caught Glendon's right glove in both his hands and cried:

"Good boy, Pat! I knew you'd do it!"

Glendon pulled his glove away. And for the first time in the years they had been together his manager heard him swear.

"You go to —!" he said and turned to hold out his hands for his seconds to pull off the gloves.

That night, after receiving the editor's final dictum that there was not a square fighter in the game, Maud Sangster cried quietly for a moment on the edge of her bed, grew angry and went to sleep hugely disgusted with herself, prizefighters and the world in general.

CHAPTER IX.

THE next afternoon she began work on an interview with Henry Addison that was destined never to be finished. It was in the private room that was accorded her at the Courier-Journal office that the thing happened.

She had paused in her writing to glance at a headline in the afternoon paper announcing that Glendon was matched with Tom Cannam when one of the doorboys brought in a card. It was Glendon's.

"Tell him I can't be seen," she told the boy.

In a minute he was back. "He says he's coming in anyway, but he'd rather have your permission."

"Did you tell him I was busy?" she asked.

"Yes'm, but he said he was coming just the same."

She made no answer, and the boy, his eyes shining with admiration for the importunate visitor, rattled on. "I know 'm. He's a awful big guy. If he started roughhousing he could clean the whole office out. He's young Glendon, who won the fight last night."

"Very well, then. Bring him in. We don't want the office cleaned out you know."

No greetings were exchanged when Glendon entered.

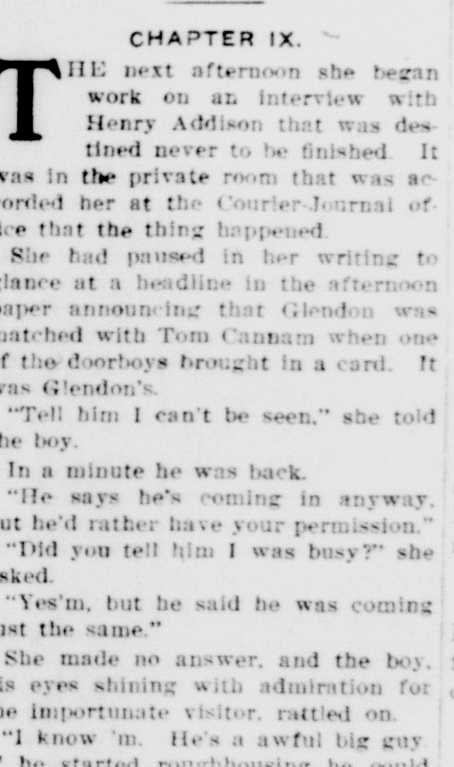

She was as cold and inhospitable as a gray day and neither invited him to a chair nor recognized him with her eyes, sitting half turned away from him at her desk and waiting for him to state his business.

He gave no sign of how this cavalier treatment affected him, but plunged directly into his subject.

"I want to talk to you," he said shortly. "That fight. It did end in that round."

She shrugged her shoulders. "I knew it would."

"You didn't," he retorted. "You didn't. I didn't."

"You didn't," he retorted.

"You didn't," he retorted. "You didn't. I didn't."

Bob turned and looked at him with quiet affection of boredom.

"What is the use?" she asked. "Prizefighting is prizefighting, and we all know what it means. The fight did end in the round I told you it would."

"It did," he agreed. "But you didn't know it would. In all the world you and I were at least two that knew Powers wouldn't be knocked out in the sixteenth."

She remained silent.

"I say you knew he wouldn't."

He spoke peremptorily and, when she still declined to speak, stepped nearer to her.

"Answer me," he commanded.

She nodded her head.

"But he was," she insisted.

"He wasn't. He wasn't knocked out at all. Do you get that? I am going to tell you about it and you are going to listen. I didn't lie to you. Do you get that? I didn't lie to you. I was a fool and they fooled me and you along with me."

"You thought you saw him knocked out. Yet the blow I struck was not heavy enough. It didn't hit him in the right place either. He made believe it did. He faked that knockout."

He paused and looked at her expectantly, and somehow, with a leap and thrill, she knew that she believed him, and she felt pervaded by a warm happiness at the reinstatement of this man who meant nothing to her and whom she had seen but twice in her life.

THAT COLD YOU HAVE

may bring sickness, doctors' bills and loss of work; you know that serious sickness usually starts with a cold, and a cold only exists where weakness exists. Remember that.

Overcome the weakness and nature cures the cold—that is the law of reason. Carefully avoid drugged pills, syrups or stimulants; they are only props and braces and whips.

It is the pure medicinal nourishment in Scott's Emulsion that quickly enriches the blood, strengthens the lungs and helps heal the air passages.

And mark this well—Scott's Emulsion generates body-heat as protection against winter sickness. Get Scott's at your drug store to-day. It always strengthens and builds up.

NOTHING BETTER FOR WEAK WOMEN

"I Never Spent Any Money That Did Me So Much Good as That I Spent for Vinol."

Bellevue, Ohio.—"I wish every tired, weak, nervous woman could have Vinol for I never spent any money in my life that did me so much good as that I spent for Vinol. My nerves were in a very bad condition, making me weak, tired, and worn out and often drowsy headaches. I had tried cod liver oil, doctor's medicines, and other preparations without benefit.

"One day a friend asked me to try Vinol. I did and soon my appetite increased, I slept better and now I am strong, vigorous and well and can do my household work with pleasure."—Mrs. LAMBORN, Bellevue, Ohio.

Nervous, weak, tired, worn-out women should take Mrs. Lamborn's advice and try Vinol for there are literally thousands of men and women who were formerly run-down, weak and nervous, who owe their good health to Vinol.

It is the medicinal, tissue building elements of the cod's liver, aided by blood making, strengthening influence of tonic iron, contained in Vinol, which makes it so efficient in all such cases.

Made My Life Worth Living

"I feel it my duty to tell others what Chamberlain's Tablets have done for me," writes Mrs. L. Dunlap of Oak Grove, Mich. "I have suffered with pains in my back and under my shoulder blade for a number of years, also with a poor appetite and constipation. I tried all of the remedies that I heard of, and a number of doctors, but got no relief. Finally a friend told me to try Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. I got a bottle of them and they soon helped my stomach; by their gentle action my bowels became more regular. Today I feel like praising them to all who suffer as I did, for they have cured me and made my life worth living."

Madam! Would You Pay 25c for 50c Worth of the Finest Cream?

Because 15,672 druggists and physicians have built laboratories and are manufacturing toilet requisites you can, today, get a big jar of the finest Face Cream in existence containing Peroxide [the original Peroxide Cream] 50c worth for 25c. If it were imported you would pay $1.00 for the same jar.

We're positive you'll agree that the quality of A. D. S. Peroxide Cream [Trademark Peroxide] is better than any 50c or $1.00 Cream—domestic or imported—you ever used, or you can have your money back.

This organization of physicians and chemists was the first to put Peroxide in Cream. We invented it in our laboratories in New York City.

The germs that live in the air and the dust that settles on your face are dangerous to your complexion. Pimples and blackheads get their start this way. But the user of Peroxide Cream has always protection against dust and pests. The Peroxide liberates oxygen and whitens the skin, keeping away pimples. The skin is made clear, soft and velvety.

The 25c jar is as big as the 50c jar of other Face Cream. At A. D. S. store

To Thine Own Self be True.

By thine own soul's law learn to live,
And if men thwart thee take no heed,
And if men hate thee have no care;
Sing thou thy song and do thy deed.
Hope thou thy hope and pray thy prayer,
And claim no crown they will not give
Nor bays they grudge thee for thy hair.
Keep thou thy soul-worn steadfast oath,
And to thy heart be true, thy heart;
What thy soul teaches learn to know
And play out thine appointed part.
And thou shalt reap as thou shalt sow,
Nor helped nor hindered in thy growth,
To thy full stature thou shalt grow.

Fix on the future's goal thy face,
And let thy feet be lured to stray
Not hither, but be swift to run,
And nowhere tarry by the way,
Until at least the end is won
And thou may look back from thy place
And see thy long day's journey done.

DUTY is sometimes considered a stern taskmaster, but, if we obey its call, we will have great happiness.—The Texas Odd Fellow.

THE thirty-fourth legislature is being marked by more harmony and more real earnest work than has characterized that body for several years past. Both the legislature and the people of Texas are to be congratulated upon the welcome change.—Hondo Anvil Herald. When the people speak in no uncertain terms, the legislators and all others interested in politics usually listen. Last July the people said by their votes that they wanted strife to cease and wanted the legislature to attend strictly to the people's business. The result is that the present session is doing good work.—Lockhart Register.

YOU'RE AN EASY PREY, with your flesh reduced below a healthy standard, for Consumption and other Scrofulous and dangerous diseases. And it's for just this condition that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is especially valuable. If you're thinner than you ought to be, whether from wasting diseases, defective nutrition, or whatever cause, the "Discovery" will surely bring you up to the healthy standard. By restoring the normal action of the deranged organs and functions, it arouses every natural source and means of nourishment. A strength-restorer and flesh-builder. It can be had in tablet or liquid form. Ingredients printed on wrapper. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original little liver pills, first put up over 40 years ago. They regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Much imitated but never equaled. Sugar coated and easy to take as candy.

are placed in the barrel and on top of them is placed the shallow iron pan. It matters not whether the barrel contains a few quarts of seed, or whether it be filled to within 6 inches of the top. Sufficient space should always be left so that the top edges of the pan, when placed on top of the seed, are at least 3 inches below the top edge of the barrel. The canvas or tarpaulin is next smoothly folded into a square somewhat larger than the top of the barrel and the three or four thicknesses of the newspaper laid out flat, ready for covering the barrel. The amount of bisulphide, accurately measured, is now uncorked, poured quickly into the iron pan, the paper laid smoothly over the open end of the barrel, on top of it the folded canvas and the latter then forced down snugly and smoothly by putting on the extra iron hoop. The barrel should be left unopened for twenty-four hours when the seed may be immediately removed and sown in bags to prevent re-infestation. The ordinary whisky barrel, of 52 gallons capacity, contains approximately seven cubic feet of space and the proper charge for this is one fluid ounce (30 cubic centimeters) of carbon bisulphide (equivalent to approximately nine lbs. of bisulphide per 1000 cubic feet of space. One should not guess at the amount. A glass measuring vessel, graduated to either cubic centimeters or fluid ounces, should be purchased from a druggist or dealer in photographic supplies and each charge should be carefully measured. The importance of this cannot be overestimated, for too small a charge of the liquid will fail to kill the weevils, while too heavy a charge will destroy the germinating power of the seed.

Immediately after fumigating, the peas should be sacked in bags of very thin mesh, such as canvas, free from holes, so that weevils cannot gain access to the seed for the purpose of laying eggs to start a new infestation. Properly fumigated and sacked, no more weevils should appear, but, nevertheless, the owner should open the sacks and examine the seed at least once in every three weeks and if signs of weevil work are noticed, re-fumigate the seed, using the same method as above.

There is no danger in handling carbon bisulphide except that all fire, such as lamps, lanterns, lighted pipes and cigars, etc., must be kept a safe distance from where it is kept or used. The vapor from it is highly explosive when coming in contact with fire. It will not explode from a sudden jar or rough handling.

In general, one should use the same precautions as with gasoline, but should remember that the bisulphide changes to a gas more rapidly and the gas sinks to the ground instead of rising. It is well to have the fumigating barrel out of doors, at least 50 feet from the nearest building, keeping it there at all times and doing all fumigating in it there. Bad weather does not interfere with this plan, for the canvas cover will shed all rain water—if it does not, it isn't tight enough cover to fumigate with.

PRECAUTIONS AT PLANTING TIME.

"Weevily" seed does not germinate well, and when it germinates the plants are deficient in vigor on account of the reduced food supply for them within the seed itself. If possible, only sound, non-infested peas should be used for seed. Where this is not to be had infested peas, before planting, should be thrown lightly into water when the badly infested seeds will float. These can be discarded and only the heavy ones which sink to the bottom of the vessel used for planting.

FUMIGATING LARGE QUANTITIES.

Peas or beans stored in bins, either loose or in sacks, can be fumigated by practically the same method, except that the building or bin containing them must be made practically airtight beforehand. Where the seed are in a tight bin the latter may be covered with tarpaulins or blankets to confine the gas, the covering being supported above the iron pans sufficiently to allow the free evaporation of the liquid. This is easily accomplished by means of a stick stuck down into the seed by each pan, the top of the stick remaining about six inches out of the seed.

The cubic contents of the bin should be carefully ascertained. Multiply its width, in feet, by its length and this

WRONG MEANING OF MESSAGE

Young Wife Makes Amusing Interpretation of Scripture in a Telegram From Girl Friend.

They were speaking of the remarkable way in which telegraphic messages are occasionally interpreted, and this story was recalled by Governor-elect David I. Walsh of Massachusetts.

Some time ago the stork visited the home of a happy young couple in a New England town, and wishing to notify her girl chum who lived in a distant city, the mother sent the following telegram:

"For unto us a child is born.—Isaiah 9:6."

"Oh, John," exclaimed the girl chum to her husband on receiving the dispatch. "I have just got a telegram from Gladys and what do you think?" "You have got me checked out at first in the conundrum game," indulgently smiled John. "What's the answer?"

"Gladys has a baby boy!" enthusiastically responded little wife. "His name is Isaiah and he weighs nine pounds and six ounces!"—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Reciprocity.

"You don't feel any personal resentment toward the man who defeated you?"

"No," replied the statesman. "I'm too broad-minded for that, of course." "As a matter of fact, you are doubtless grateful to him for allowing you to leave behind the cares of public office and devote yourself to more lucrative private business."

"Certainly. But I never forget a favor. I'm going to do my best to give him an opportunity to feel the same kind of gratitude next election."

Faulty Measurements.

"I wouldn't have minded what you said about me," said the man who protests mildly, "if you hadn't been so inconsistent."

"What do you mean?" asked the vituperative person.

"Your sense of proportion is wrong. In that letter you wrote about me, you started out by saying my head was swelled, and in the next sentence you refer to me as a 'pinhead.'"

HARD ON HER.

Knowsitt—Miss Antique is certainly a self-possessed woman.

Caustique—Yes, and I don't imagine she'll ever get a chance to dispose of the property.

A Retreat.

"And you call this your music room?" "Yes," replied Mr. Cumrox. "But there are no musical instruments in it."

"No. It's so constructed that I can't hear any of the surrounding music that may be turned on from time to time."

An Up-to-Date Scholar.

"Now, Johnny," said the old-fashioned member of the school board, "who was the Father of His Country?" The bright boy of the class hesitated a moment and then replied: "Please, sir, they don't teach eugenics in our school."

Equivocal.

"Harold, darling, pa won't let me keep that bull pup you gave me." "Dearest, are you much disappointed that you have to give it up?" "No, Harold, as long as he will let me keep you."

Same as Human Way.

"That mule is a philosopher." "In what way?" "He accepts the fact that life is just one continual combination of wheel and whoa."

Severe Head Pains Caused By Catarrh Cured By Peruna

I Feel It a Duty to Mankind to Let All Know of My Cure. Peruna Did It.

Mr. W. H. Chaney, R. F. D. 2, Sutherland, Pittsylvania Co., Va., writes: "For the past twelve months I have been a sufferer from catarrh of the head. Since taking four bottles of your Peruna I feel like a different person altogether. The severe pains in my head have disappeared, and my entire system has been greatly strengthened."

"This is my first testimonial to the curative qualities of any patent medicine. I feel it a duty to mankind to let them know of Peruna. In my estimation it is the greatest medicine on earth for catarrh."

We have thousands of testimonials like Mr. Chaney's. Some of them were cured after years of suffering and disappointment in finding a remedy.

Send for free copy of "Bills of Life." The Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio. Those who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.

Our Sunday School is doing good work and the children are taking great interest in the work. We wish that the parents would show greater interest in the Sunday School.

Last Sunday Miss Auguste Scheile celebrated her birthday, inviting everybody to help her celebrate the day. We wish the young lady many happy returns of the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Alex Marquis, one of our prosperous farmers, went to Hondo Saturday on business.

Dr. Bradley and sons, Ben and Jack, and Jack Fusselman, made a flying trip up here Saturday, returning Sunday. The doctor says it is cold up here.

Mr. Editor: I will whisper something in your left ear, for it will not do to say it aloud, or print it in heavy type, as the people may doubt what we say and print, viz: On March 8, at 10 a. m., it commenced snowing and by 11 a. m. the ground was covered with a fine mantle of fine snow, and the snow still falling thicker than it has for several years. Who has ever heard of such a thing in Medina County at this time of the year.

Tarpley is on the boom. We now have three mercantile establishments in our big city.

Geo. Dickson opened up a new store here last week.

Small grain in this community is looking well and prospects for a good crop of oats and wheat are fine.

There has been very little corn planted up here up to now, as it has been too cold and wet all the time, and our farmers will wait for spring to commence before planting. Cotton acreage will be greatly reduced, as the present prices do not look good to the farmers.

Messrs. Jim Glass and Allen Graham and son, John, are on the Medina river, below the Dam, digging up large stumps which they are shipping. They realize a good price for the stumps. So if you have any large Walnut on your place it will pay you to see Mr. Glass.

Everybody up here is burning the grass on the range in order to give the young grass a better chance to grow, and make better feed for stock. It is a fine sight to see fire on the top of the mountain on dark nights.

product by its height, and the resulting figure will be the number of cubic feet in it. As in the case of the barrel fumigation, nine pounds of the bisulphide should be used to each 1000 cubic feet of space. This rule applies regardless of whether the bin is full or only part full. If there are cracks in the bin or building that allow any escape of gas, a little more of the liquid should be used to make up for that lost through leakage.

Fumigation of buildings, or in buildings, is fraught with more danger than fumigating in barrels or tanks outside, mainly on account of the difficulty in keeping all smokers out of the building and away from it and also on account of the larger quantity of bisulphide causing the gas to spread to a greater distance. Where it is possible to fumigate out of doors, using barrels, we strongly urge that it be done in this way, even if several barrels have to be used or several days taken to complete the fumigation of all seed.

For the use of merchants and seedmen handling peas in large quantities, we recommend the use of a galvanized iron tank or cistern with a tight fitting top. This can be placed sufficiently distant from the buildings to obviate all danger to the latter. The cubic contents of such tanks are easily figured and the proper charge of bisulphide computed from the above directions.

Carbon bisulphide should be obtainable from any druggist at a price varying from 18 to 20 cents per pound. The manufacturer's price on bisulphide in quantity, at the factory, is usually ten cents per pound, with a charge for shipping tank of about two cents per pound. Where much bisulphide is to be used in a neighborhood money will be saved by the farmers clubbing together and ordering the bisulphide direct from the maker. The writer of this will be glad, on request, to place any one in touch with the manufacturers.

HEAT FOR DESTROYING THE WEEVILS.

It has been found by Dr. F. H. Chittenden, of the Bureau of Entomology, U. S. Department of Agriculture, that a temperature of 145 degrees (Fahrenheit) will kill all weevils in the seed without injuring the germinating power. In the case of peas which are not intended for planting purposes a slightly higher temperature will do no harm.

As the four-spotted bean weevil rarely breeds in peas or beans which are old and thoroughly dry, a thorough drying and curing of the seed by means of dry heat would probably prevent future re-infestation. There is no reason, however, for supposing that such a treatment would in any way protect the seed against re-infestation by the common bean-weevil or by the cowpea weevil.

Weevils may be destroyed by pouring scalding water over the peas or beans. The hot water should be immediately poured off and the peas or beans spread out and thoroughly dried before storing away.

KEROSENE TREATMENT.

The Oklahoma Experiment Station recommends the following method of killing the weevils with kerosene: "Spray the peas, evenly and thinly spread on a canvas or floor, with kerosene at the rate of 1 pint to 10 bushels or 600 pounds of peas. An atomizer, hand spray pump, or very fine sprinkler should be used, after which the peas should be shoveled so as to bring the treated and untreated seed together until all have an equal coating of the kerosene."

WILSON NEWELL, State Entomologist.

P. S.—Maize and sorghum seed may be treated in the same way for weevils.

Died.

Mr. Michael Naegelin departed this life after a lingering illness and great suffering on Thursday morning, March 11, 1915, and was laid to rest at the Catholic cemetery, after requiem mass, on Friday morning. Rev. Father Heckmann performed the last sad rites.

Deceased was born in Alsace, Germany, August 15, 1838, and came to this country with his parents, brothers and sisters in 1847. He was happily married May 3rd, 1870, to Miss Josephine Mehr, at Castroville. This union was blessed with ten children, of which seven, two sons and five daughters, survive. Besides the grief-stricken widow and fatherless children the departed leaves twenty-two grandchildren, three brothers and two sisters, and a very large number of other near and dear relatives to mourn his death. A large cortege of mourning relatives and friends escorted the remains to its last resting place. We join this entire community in sympathy with the bereaved and grief-stricken ones. R. I. P.

Saved Girl's Life

"I want to tell you what wonderful benefit I have received from the use of Thedford's Black-Draught," writes Mrs. Sylvania Woods, of Clifton Mills, Ky.

"It certainly has no equal for la grippe, bad colds, liver and stomach troubles. I firmly believe Black-Draught saved my little girl's life. When she had the measles, they went in on her, but one good dose of Thedford's Black-Draught made them break out, and she has had no more trouble. I shall never be without in my home." For constipation, indigestion, headache, dizziness, malaria, chills and fever, biliousness, and all similar ailments, Thedford's Black-Draught has proved itself a safe, reliable, gentle and valuable remedy.

If you suffer from any of these complaints, try Black-Draught. It is a medicine of known merit. Seventy-five years of splendid success proves its value. Good for young and old. For sale everywhere. Price 25 cents.

CALOMEL WHEN BILIOUS? NO! STOP! MAKES YOU SICK AND SALIVATES

"Dodson's Liver Tone" Is Harmless To Clean Your Stagnant Liver and Bowels.

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with your bile crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight on my guarantee.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it can not salivate or make you sick.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your bowels of that sour bile and constipated waste which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable. I guarantee that a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will keep your entire family feeling fine for months. Give it to your children. It is harmless; doesn't gripe and they like its pleasant taste.

Medina Dam is Excepted.

Austin, Tex., March 17.—After adopting an amendment which will have the effect of exempting the Medina Dam, the House finally passed the Cates bill requiring fish ladders at dams across flowing streams, in order that the fish may ascend to deposit their spawn. Mr. Schwegman objected to the bill on the ground that it would require a fish ladder at the Medina Dam, which, he said, would be practically impossible on account of its height. An amendment by Burmeister was then adopted applying the law only to "regular flowing streams," which removed the objection, as the Medina River during extreme drouths ceases to flow.

Burglary at D'Hanis.

Last Sunday while A. C. Rothe and wife of Seco were attending church at D'Hanis thieves entered their residence and stole several articles, including a diamond bracelet, ladies' watch, revolver and several other articles and a few dollars in silver.

Mr. Rothe noticed his loss after returning home late Sunday evening. Monday morning he went to D'Hanis and reported his loss to Constable E. Broeze, who arrested one suspicious character there and two others at Lacoste, who, it is understood, were found with some of the stolen goods in their possession. They were placed in jail here and a charge of burglary filed against them.

Two of the suspects first arrested have been released. The two arrested at Lacoste are held in the county jail. Both are white men, one about 20 and the other about 30 years old. They are strangers and are supposed to be from New Mexico or Arizona. The younger prisoner told the officers that several of the articles stolen from the Rothe residence, and which was overlooked by the officers when searched prior to placing the prisoners in the calaboose at Lacoste were concealed in a quilt furnished them for covering, where they were subsequently found by the officers. Information was also given the officers of concealments of other articles, the results of other burglaries.

Lacoste Farmers Organize.

Lacoste, Tex., March 14.—A farmers' institute was organized here Saturday afternoon by Fletcher Davis, field agent for the Department of Agriculture, and at a meeting that night twenty-eight members were enrolled.

The meeting was arranged for 2:30 p. m., but as the attendance was not as large as was expected, the institute only was organized and elected officers and adjourned for another meeting at night. The officers are as follows: Henry Haass, president; L. C. Luckenbach, vice president; J. A. McCaskil, secretary; Louis Biediger, entomologist.

At the night meeting Mr. Davis outlined the many advantages of such an organization and what could be accomplished by co-operation. Mr. Davis was accompanied by Sam Neil of the same department, who made a very interesting talk on plant life and practical farming and the many advantages to be obtained through co-operation with the Department of Agriculture.

All present seemed enthused, and the results of this meeting will no doubt help to better conditions in this section.—San Antonio Express.

Missionary Society.

Forty-four members of the Missionary Society met at the church Monday afternoon in a devotional and literary meeting.

After the scripture lesson several very interesting papers were read on the subject and a talk by the leader, which was both interesting and instructive.

The meeting was closed with song and prayer, after which the ladies busied themselves in planting and watering the flowers in the church yard.

The Methodist quarterly conference was in session here Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Willie Nietenhoefer dug up an unknown grave in the yard of his brother, Charles, one day last week. The bones of a human body were found in a decayed box of about 7 feet in length, as were also a six-shooter, ax, horse-shoe, shells of snails and oysters. As these things were found among the bones it is supposed that it was either a Mexican or an Indian that was buried there, perhaps, long before the settling of white people here, for no one knew of a grave being there.

Lectured at Comfort.

Messrs. Fletcher Davis and Sam Neil, lecturers for the Texas Department of Agriculture, spent Wednesday in Comfort. In the morning they visited the school and made short talks to the pupils, and in the afternoon delivered lectures at a special meeting of the Farmers' Institute.

Mr. Davis dwelt mainly on diversification, trucking, cotton growing as practiced by southern farmers, home gardens, fruit growing, preserving surplus fruit by canning, co-operative marketing, and the plans of the Department of Agriculture to help farmers in every way.

Mr. Neil spoke on the quality of dry farming, trucking, soil culture, principles of retaining soil moisture, the need of vegetable matter in soil to retain moisture, principles of plants and how they gather food. He explained that sheep are of great benefit to grain farmers by packing soil, and gave useful hints on the management of farm animals, especially dairy cattle, and stated that kind treatment of animals is of great importance.
